Your first AI workflow.

Without the overwhelm.

You don’t need ten new tools.
You need one useful process.

ONE TASK

Clear input → AI draft → Your review

A beginner’s guide in 6 slides →

Start small. Repeat often.

01

Choose a task you already understand.
That makes the result easier to judge.

01 Weekly notes → action list

Clear input. Easy to check.

02 A long article → a short brief

Review the summary against the original.

03 A rough idea → a post outline

Keep your perspective. Improve the structure.

Make one recurring task easier before adding another.

Good output starts here.

Tell the AI what success looks like.

YOUR REUSABLE BRIEF

CONTEXT

Who is this for? What do they need?

TASK

What should the AI help you do?

FORMAT

A checklist? A table? A short draft?

BOUNDARIES

What must it preserve or avoid?

Never paste confidential or sensitive information.

Automate the draft. Not your judgment.

AI can sound confident and still be wrong.
Treat every output as a first draft.

Check the facts
Open the source. Verify the claim.

Check the fit
Does this actually serve your audience?

Make it yours
Add context only you can bring.

A review step is part of the workflow, not a workaround.

Test. Refine. Then repeat.

Use a few real examples. Compare the result with what you would have done yourself.

01 Is it accurate?

No invented facts or missing context.

02 Is it useful?

The output solves your original task.

03 Is it worth repeating?

The editing effort feels manageable.

If it fails, improve the brief before adding more tools.

SAVE THIS FOR YOUR FIRST BUILD

One useful workflow beats ten saved tools.

YOUR STARTER CHECKLIST

1. Pick one repeatable task
2. Write a clear input brief
3. Define a useful output
4. Add a human review step
5. Test, refine and save the process

Save this checklist. Then build one small thing today.
